Many of our friends were in that boat, said the song's co-writer Shannon Rubicam, about the iconic lyrics. They start to get restless and it's, 'What am I going to do?' and 'I can't stand being alone again tonight,' and 'I really don't want to just go to a party, I really want to find someone, try to find someone to love.' so it's more than the long-term partnership people want. For introverts, people with stage fright, anyone prone to lip sync battles or turn games, and those who don't usually tend to grab a microphone and throw themselves in front of an audience no matter how many beers they've been drinking, karaoke songs can be a nightmare - especially if you can't sing. Your friends may be counting down to the next time they huddle in a sweaty basement for cheap, drunken beers, heartfelt renderings of Toni Braxton's Unbreak My Heart, but if poetry really isn't your thing - or if you're too scared to try - it might sound like your own personal hell. And yet, somehow, it seems like people won't stop talking about how much fun they had at karaoke last weekend! You don't want to embarrass yourself so much that you end up online, but life is strange and cruel and the sad fact is that your well-meaning friends may very well drag you out of the house one night for what you might describe as an all-night panic attack. But don't worry. Just because you might hate singing, can't sing, don't like an audience, or just don't like people in general doesn't mean you can't bring it during karaoke night and impress everyone with your absolute ostrich and confidence. You don't have to be good — or even average — in poetry if you're armed with the right arsenal of foolproof songs. If you're absolutely tone deaf but want to buckle your heart without smashing all the windows, try these easy, fun songs, and watch them all bow down:Spice up your life, Spice Girls you probably already know all the lyrics, so this is an easy one. Love Cabin, the B-52's SNo One is looking forward to professional-grade vocal styling from the Love S cabin, so go crazy. I'm not a girl, not a woman yet, Britney Spearsources this song when everyone's drunk enough to sing along to you, because believe me -- they are. Pony, Ginwyn always makes the crowd happy. Thigh boost not included. I love rock 'n' roll, Joan Jett and the Black Hearts If you really want to take over the intersectional atmosphere you've troted out with I'm Not a Girl, Not a Woman Yet, continue this song with this song. Girls just want to have fun, Cyndi Lauper Lauber isn't shy about being a belter. Summer nights, John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John. Anaconda, Nicki Minajno sings required! Man! I feel like a woman! Anya Twain has a 99% chance that your friends will look at you this time, so no one will ever know the extent of your tone deafness. No Scrubs, TLC's in you. Give it out. Billie Jean, Michael Jackson giving the audience pressure with your dance moves. My boy, Brandi and Monica Grieve, are partners to help you. Don't stop believing, a journey and a little inspiration to get through the night. Don't stop believing you're the greatest! Now, repeat after me.You can do it: I admit it - I'm pretty much a karaoke virgin. I'm an obsessive music fan and I've always loved singing (I even Performing as a child), but something about getting up in front of a room full of drunken strangers to belt out terrible pop music just never sounds inviting to me. Although now that I'm typing it, I wonder why not, because it sounds kind of fun in hindsight. Anyway, if you're like me and feel a little nervous about ruining your karaoke performance even though there are all the words right there on the screen in front of you, don't despair. There are a lot of simple songs that are almost impossible to screw up, and you're guaranteed the will of the audience even if you can get off the track. If you're feeling a little adventurous and ready to try, pick one of those songs and you're already ahead of the game. After all, it doesn't take much to provide a room full of drunk people who love karaoke already, so your job is easy: get up there and give it your best shot. You might even get hooked! Lisa Loeb, Stay Pretty much everyone knows and remembered every lyric to this song since it came out in 1995 - 20 years ago! You can't go wrong with staying, and whatever genre of music the bar patrons are for, they still love it. Cranberry, zombie zombie is super easy to remember the lyrics, but it's also the most fun to sing because you can just yell Zom-BAY, zom-BAY-AY-AY-OO about 500 times until it's over. You're imagining singing this now, aren't you? Jay-Z, 99 problems another classic for music lovers of every genre. It's one of Jay-Z's biggest hits, and one of his most recognizable hits. It's a feel-good anthem, in many ways, even if it's a little untouchable (and that's one of the great things about it, too). Announcers, 500 miles from the 1990s were a wonderful time in music, and 800 miles is one of the catchiest things to come out of the decade. I don't think I remember anything but that chorus and this da-da bit the top of my head, but these are clearly the most important parts, anyway. Chumba, Tovathumping Ho, the one who hit the wonders that were Chumbumba. I don't know what they smoked and how that song came to be, but I know it was a gift from a higher power and it has to be preserved in karaoke form for all time. Jumper, I'm only vaguely ashamed to admit how much I loved Tyred Yee Blind and that song when he came out. It seems a little gloomy, but I hope everyone at the bar is a little too drunk to notice or they'll be too busy singing along to care. Montel Jordan, this is how we do it. That's how we do it guaranteed to start the party and continue it until dawn. If you're ready to show up, like the kids say, this is the one for you. Picture: Getty Images
